Now that we've discussed a broad range of changes to policing practices, I'd like to ask you a few questions about other criminal justice system topics and the spread of the coronavirus ...

49. Because coronavirus spreads rapidly in overcrowded prisons and jails, infecting prisoners and workers at the facility, some facilities have moved people who pose little or no threat to public safety out of prison and into alternative programs. Do you approve or disapprove of this policy?

Approve	66%
Disapprove	25
(Not sure / Refused)	9

50. Because jails and prisons are hot spots for the spread of coronavirus – and because those over age 60 or with serious health conditions are more vulnerable – some places have moved these types of prisoners who pose little or no threat to public safety out of prison and into home detention. Do you approve or disapprove of this policy?

Approve	69%
Disapprove	23
(Not sure / Refused)	8

Turning to a few final criminal justice issues...

51. Right now, when someone is arrested or convicted for a low-level drug-related offense, their record is often permanent and follows them for the rest of their lives. Would you favor or oppose these low-level records being automatically sealed – meaning they would not be accessible to potential employers or landlords – if the person remained crime free for five years?

Favor	77%
Oppose	17
(Not sure / Refused)	6

Would you be more or less likely to support automatically sealing low-level records – or would it have no effect on your opinion – if you learned that... [RANDOMIZE]

52. It would allow states to save money and focus resources on people who pose higher threats to public safety.	62%	23	10	5
53. It would allow companies that are having trouble finding workers access to a broader pool of potential employees.	59%	25	10	5
54. It would make it much easier for these individuals to stay crime free and contribute to society.	68%	20	8	4
55. Those who want to seal their records can currently do so themselves by filing appropriate forms and paying a fee.	46%	28	20	6
56. Automatic record sealing puts everyone on a level playing field because it doesn't require people to file paperwork or pay a fee for the service.	54%	26	14	7
57. Earlier this year Congress created a program to provide loans to businesses that kept their employees on the payroll during the pandemic. However, a lot of this money is going to wealthy corporations, and less is going to struggling small businesses. This is partly because many small businesses are owned by people with a criminal record, who are prohibited from receiving these funds. Currently, about one in three adult Americans has a criminal record.

Do you believe the federal government should prohibit business owners with criminal records from receiving these funds?
